At the South and West latterly it has been found that sheep-raining and wood-growing can be carried on with a profit equal to that derived from almost any other branch of husbandry, and many are pursuing it with much zeal and many are pursuing it with much zeal and hare any "The cust of producting wood in this seaton with so that early." From the introduction of Perusan grano, however, the practice of composting of the part of that county, the count of rusing them is seventy-five counts band. Similar testimony is given in the same work of the success and profit of rusing sheep, from gentlemen in Virginia, Indiana, Illinois, and other States. Wherever sheep husbandry is on the decrease, there, evidently, the farmers are going back instead of moving forward in the grand march of agricultural progress. Let every backandman bestir him sit, and put on his armor in definee of an animal so noble, so priminave, and so altogether useful and accessary to over compost as it the same time armor in definee of an animal so noble, so priminave, and so altogether useful and accessary to over compost as it the same time armor in definee of an animal so noble, so to over compost as it the sheep; at the same time armory in limited to the canine. Farmer, you should not have copied that. Such doctrine as Mr. Emerson's abould not even be marined among farmers. Don't you know, and if you don't you ought to be informed, that far more than half of the cattle and sheep in the country are almost rained by turning them out in spring, before they have fall feed on pasture? Mr. Einerou, nor any one the, ever asw cattle or sheep that were wintered as they ought to be, scoar to hurt them when put on rich pasture; and a for tarring them out early to make them eat course grass on the low lands—I suppose he means marranded to the district of the mark to eat the papers, that meal, sal', or not be low lands to the papers, that meal, sal', or something else, should be sprinkled on bad hay to we ke the cattle eat it. Sowing Grain in Organia, -We frequently see this folly along the line of our rail-roads, in our summer travel. Here we see a splindid crop of rye, and there a vigorous growth of outs or beller. spi udid crop of rye, and there a vigorous growth of oats or harley. Sometimes Indian corn is planted in a young orchard. We believe the practice to be bad bushandry. A neighbor of ours has an orchard, set about ten years since. He took admirable care of it for acceptance. plants, which are in the mode of culture I have described placed wholly out of the roll, the formation of unwords roots is easily prevent, and always described placed wholly out of the roll, the formation of unwords roots is easily prevent, and always the roll, and whomever this is done, namerous blossoms will soon appear, and almost every blossom will soon appear and almost every blossom will soon appear that the above facts, which are more fully explained in the Philosophical Transactions for 180% were sufficient to prove that the same fluid or sap gives excited and that, whenever a plant of the potation of the crop of the robus of the soil, must necessarily take place, succeeded in producing to the roll, and this must prove injurious. It is his purpose to continue the work with his present machine, until he alanl have established by experience what improvements are necessary, or may be made, in order to render his invention perfectly adapted to the wants of Western agriculturists. These once fixed upon will be adopted. He now thinks he has learned something which will prove profitable; we doubt not be has. We shall look to see the results of his experience demonstrated.

The Improvement of grass Land, the first thing to be done, is the removal of all stagnant water by means of thorough underdraining. Unless this is accomplished, the best of cultivation, seeding, and top-dressing will fail to produce their full effect.

When our meadows fail, from whatever cause, it is generally advisable to plow them np in the fall, and cultivate them thoroughly for two or three years, with corn, potatoes, or other root crops, manuring them heavily, and seeding down again when the white daisy and other weeds have been destroyed, and the old
